Methodology

Data Collection:

Data is collected daily by IOM staff deployed in the field. Locations that are inaccessible or insecure are assessed through phone interviews with partners or key informants present in the concerned locations.

Data verification:

The data collected is verified and cross-checked with partners on the field to provide the best estimates possible and ensure data accuracy.

Data analysis and dissemination:

Data is collected and analyzed on a daily basis and shared through weekly reports. Daily incident reports are also published in case of important population movements that require immediate attention.

Definitions

Types of Movement:

• Organized: planned movements from one location to another, usually with assistance from various actors on the ground, such as government, the military, and other humanitarian actors.

• Spontaneous: unplanned movement usually as a result of sudden triggers, such as attacks, conflicts and other situations that pose a threat.

Triggers:

• Voluntary relocation: voluntary movement of persons who are not under critical threat from one location to another.

• Involuntary relocation: involuntary movement of persons from one location to another, usually due to intervention by other actors, for example, the closure of a camp in a location, requiring IDPs in the location to move to other locations, security reasons, and other prompts.

• Conflicts/Attacks: population movement triggered by security threats in a location.

• Poor living condition: population movement as a result of difficult circumstances and poor access to basic needs, such as, shelter, food, water, livelihoods and other needs.

• Military operations: population movements as a result of the arrival of the military to a location requiring civilians to move to other locations, to avoid being caught in conflict situations that might ensue.

• Improved security: population movement as a result of a reduced threat level or danger in a location.

Needs: areas where an affected population requires humanitarian assistance to alleviate suffering and improve the chance of survival.

Available Services: humanitarian assistance provided to the affected population in a location to alleviate suffering and to improve the chance of survival.
